in Milwaukee.

Woman Suffrage Voted Down in Rhode Island.

The Day in Ynsilanti. The contest here was earnest, but entirely quite and orderly, and reasonably good-natured. The prohibition amendment excited most interest, though there was no lack of attention to the city and ward tickets, the Circuit Judgeship, and the water works proposition. The supporters of the latter, however, made no particular effort, havng known long before that it would be overwhelmingly defeated. Ladies visited the most of the polls in the city, in the interest of the amendment, and were everywhere well treated; and at the third ward poll little girls stood nearly all of the forenoon offering "Yes" ballots, and cards with "Please vote for the amendment" upon them. The result of the vote in this city upon tions of its friends. The vote was very full-1190 on Mayor, against 1025 last spring, and 1248 last fall. As compared with the vote for Governor last fall, the vote on the state ticket shows a falling off of 32 republican, 67 democracic, and 7 prohibition votes, with 6 greenback-labor against none last year. The reëlection of Mr. Cornwell for Mayor by an increased majority, attests his popularity. The new Council will stand nine democrats to one republican. One of the hold-over democrats was elected by the aid of the prohibitionists, and one of the democrats elected this year was nominated and endorsed by the republican caucus in a republican ward.

FLORAL TRIBUTES.—Mr. Osband has eft with us a photograph of the floral tributes at the funeral of the late C. K. Leonard, at Ottawa, Kansas. There was a large pillow with calla lilies at the corners; a harp, a wreath and anchor, a sheaf with smilax and calla, star and crescent, etc. Such testimonials of esteem and affection, to a man dying away from home and among people where he had been but temporarily employed, tell how favorable was the impression he had made in the few months that he had spent there. The picture can be seen at this office.

THE SANITARIUM.-Dr. Spinney's administration at the Ypsilanti Sanitarium has been inaugurated by a thorough renovating of the entire establishment and the wholesale application of paint and paper in the way of adornment. The new public parlor has been completed, furnished and opened and many radical improvements have been made throughout the entire establishment. Persons who have not visited the Sanitarium for several months will be pleasantly surprised with the many changes and improvements that have been made. It is not the least exaggeration to say that the Ypsilanti Sanitarium now ranks as one of the most complete in the country; and it is under the management of a physician who thoroughly understands the many modes of health-giving treatment made possible by the famous waters and the apparatus of the institution. If you have a friend in any part of the world whom you wish to give information regarding the Sanitarium, call at the Sanitarium office and get circulars, or send their address to Dr. Spinney and circulars will be sent to them.

If there is any city in Michigan or anywhere in this country, with a population not more than twice as large as that of Ypsilanti, that can equal our record as the home or alma mater of 22,656. to succeed in their attempts to spread the fame of our city and institutions. It must not be presumed that the singers representing us throughout the country are all we have. Ypsilanti is in present possession of sufficient vocal talent to fill a dozen opera companies, and then have left four or five of the best church choirs in the state. We are a modest and unassuming people in most particulars, but when singing is the subject under discussion we insist upon "Claiming everything with contidence" and are prepared to substan-

Benton's Departure from Congress.

The close of the session reminds me of the last night of the Thirtythird Congress in the House of Representatives. The Senate sent over 145 amendments to the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill, and it was 8 o'clock in the morning before they were disposed of by a committee of conference. Mr. Pratt then asked whether it would be in order to have the restaurant servants bring in breakfast. "Let me amend the question," said Mike Walsh. "by having cocktails and whisky punches introduced also." A conversational debate followed, during which some very clever things were said, and at last the Sergeant-at-Arms reported a quorum present. Several bills were then passed under a suspension of the rules, and during the taking of the yeas and nays the clerk called Mr. Benton's name, when that gentleman appeared at the door of the main aisle and protested, with violent gesticulaagainst his name being called. He said he was an ex-member, and that the session that day was a libel on the Sabbath. Some confusion followed this episode, when the Speaker pro tem., Mr. Orr, told the gentleman that "Then," promptly retorted Mr. Orr, "if the gentleman is not a member, the doorkeeper will put him out.' Mr. Benton did not say another word, but taking the package in which he had tied up the contents of his desk, 1855, closing a Congressional career that he had commenced in the Senate | ter go ter the store." on August 10,1821.—Ben: Perleg Poore.

Miss Braddock's Great Income.

In an article on "The Profits of Novel-Writing," in The Cosmopolitan, William Westall, the English novelist,

It will thus be seen that novelwriting nowadays is a precarious and not very profitable calling. A very fair price, as things go, is $2,000 for the serial rights of a full-length story, and assuming that the author makes $400 by the three-volume edition and as much more by a cheap edition, his total profit would amount to $2,800not a great deal, considering the labor and the time that the writing of a novel involves. It should also be borne in mind that unless a man strikes oil at the first venture he may have to peg away for years before his reputation justifies him in asking three or four hundred pounds for the serial right, or a third of the smaller sum for the other rights. He may, indeed, never obtain anything like these prices; and after one or two attempts, retire discomfited from the field.

On the other hand, there are undoubtedly prizes, and if a writer reaches the top of the tree and is as prolific as Miss Braddon, he can make, if not a great fortune, at any rate a handsome income, by his pen. Miss Braddon, I should think, makes more money by fiction than any other writer of the day. Her fertility is prodigious. She obtains high prices for her serial rights. She has kept her copyrights in her own hands, and her books are always selling. Novels that she wrote twenty and more years ago are still bringing grist to her mill, and if she were to stop writing to-me her two shilling novels would continue to yield her a revenue for as many years to come.

I believe Miss Braddon gets about $5,000 for the serial rights of a new story, and as she writes something like two a year, or at any rate three in two years, her takings from this source alone must be considerable. There may be two or three other writers who command as high a price, but none who is equally popular and prolific.-Whether her works will live is another question. I am speaking of the present.

One day as she stood at the window, watching the busy street, and wondering why she alone of all children was crippled and thin and weak, a snowflake came sailing down through the Decembersky, paused a moment at the window and then crept in at a broken pane and rested on her wasted hand. A Lost Art.

Girls are never taught to curtsy now, as they used to be. A real, oldfashioned "courtesy," as it used to be spelled, is quite an elaborate performance. My mother had lessons in it when she was a girl. First, you draw back the right foot, getting it straight behind the other, and down you go, as far as the suppleness of your limbs will permit, coming up "to the recover" with all weight on the right foot, and the left pointed out most daintily. A curtsy is about the only thing in the world that is helped out by the high-heeled shoe.

Just before we reached our destination, we passed a tent where an adventurous party of pleasure seekers was camping out. A small boy, with his head and the greater part of his face tied up in a blue veil, was piling brush on a large bonfire, close to the door of the tent.

America has the best, the strongest, the manliest, the handsomest specimens of the Hebrew race. As you go eastward in Europe you seem to approach nearer and nearer to the Shakespearean type. While the Jew in Austria-Hungary is, through his financial power, the companion of the high social classes, often of the nobility, and sometimes himself ennobled, as a person in the lower walks of life he preserves the humble and submissive bearing which was until late years everywhere his most notable characteristic. The sufferance, which was the badge of all his tribe in Shakspeare's time, continues to be his distinctive mark in the southeast of Europe. It is a smoking chair, which is a work both of art and utility. The theme in its design was " and to him who reclines his weary bones in it after the theory of the Arab proverb that "to him who wears shoes it is as if the earth were shod with leather," it will seem that the earth is a bed of clouds. The frame is of tough kiln-dried oak, cut into long, and apparantly impossible curves. The upholstering is in dark brown leather, which harmonizes with the highly polished resewoodlegs. The novelty in the chair is a soft, richly ipholstered leg-rest rising from the front of the seat. Lounging in this springy, melting seat, the Secretary of State can hang his tired limbs over the leg rest, throw his head back in the gentle depths of upholstery, and dissipate the cares of state in whiff on whiff of smoke.—New York Sun.

At the present day one note of fashion is undoubtedly to be "fast;" and it is especially required of every married couple that they shall unite a profound indifference for each other, with a corresponding fondness for the husband or wife, as the case may be, of some other person. "So far has this gone," says the cultured and fastidious Epoch, "that a man of fashion in New York or Boston would think twice before taking a walk with his wife in broad daylight, and certain really affectionate husbands are under the painful necessity of carrying on a kind of clandestine intimacy with their own wives. All this comes very hard on some people who are by nature incapable of what is called a 'flirtation,' but' who are bound to be 'in the swim,' cost what it may. Every one is familiar with that frequent but always pitiable sight of a middle-aged man, who, if he consulted his inclinations, would be sitting at home in slippers, surrounded by his family, trying to give an appearance of wickedness, in the corner of a ball-room, to some perfectly colorless tete-a-tete! And perhaps this spectacle is hightened by the fact that his wife, a good little woman, whose conversational powers find their appropriate field in the nursery, is at the same time making an equally ineffectual attempt to pose as a married flirt! Other notes of fashion are sometimes thought to be the possession of a furlined overcoat or a pair of bob-tail roans, but these are external and accidental circumstances, such as might confer distinction in a savage tribe. but surely not in this enlightened community. It would perhaps be more true to say that a frank and noisy behavior is a present note of fashion, and this conduct is especially required of women, who are encouraged to discuss in public, with a loud voice, the insolence of their cooks and the diseases of their children."

Down on Slang.

Said a fascinating girl of the period to a Telegram reporter last night: Isn't it just too awful that young men of the present day drop onto so much slang in their talk? I suppose it is because they are built that way; but then if they only knew what an old chestnut slang in all its varieties really is, they would let up on its use. Why, although my acquaintance is only with young men that are way up, don't cher know, I eatch on to some new bang up slang phrase every day. And you can gamble your boots that I am always fly enough to let them know I am on to their racket, too. I don't know what makes the young dudes sling in so much slang in their chin music unless they think that it creates the impression that they are flip. If they reckon that, though, they're way off, I should smile "Ah, there!-excuse the expression." She went on with a smile: "I think all the girls ought to carry chestnut bells, and whenever a young man used slang they could ring him off and yell rats! in his ear. That would be sitting down on him with a vengeance. twitter it would. If the girls would tumble to this kind of a racket, adopt the plan and let 'er go, Gallagher, the young man would soon be able to give us his song without using a single slang phrase.

Just then the dear creature's car came along and, as she stepped on the platform, she said:

The pita plant of Honduras invites It is a wide door. The old cross has been taken apart, and its two pieces against the ring only made it shine fortune is made. Mr. Burchard, our consul, reports that this plant, which has never been cultivated, grows spontaneously and in apparently inexhaustible quantities by the margin of every river and lagoon, and, indeed, anywhere below the altitude of two thousand feet. It can be had for the cost of cutting. The fiber is susceptible of a thousand uses. The people of Honduras convert it into thread for sewing boots and shoes, and into nets, fish lines, and cordage. The finest hammocks and most costly are also made of it. The small quantities which have been sent to this market have been manufactured into handkerchiefs, laces, ribbons, false hair, and wigs. The difficulty is to decorticate the plant without rotting or injuring the fiber. The man who can do that will be able to take fortune at the flood. -N. Y. Herald.

Spring Medicine

Everybody needs and should take a good spring medicine, for two reasons:
1st. The body is now more susceptible to benefit from medicine than at any other season.
2d. The impurities which have accumulated in the olood should be expelled, and the system given tone and strength, before the prostrating effects of warm weather are feit.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best spring medicine for everybody. It purifies the blood. It sharpens the appetite. It tones the digestion. It overcomes debility. It builds up the whole system. Try it this spring. "Last spring I was troubled with boils caused by my blood being out of order. Two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla cured me, and I recommend it to others." J. Schoon, Peoria, Ill.

Thoroughly cleanse the blood, which is the fountain of health, by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, and bodily health and vigor will be established.

Golden Medical Discovery cures all humors, from the common pimple, blotch, or eruption, to the worst Scrofula, or bloodpoison. Especially has it proven its efficacy in curing Salt-rheum or Tetter, Fever-sores, Hip-joint Disease, Scrofulous Sores poison. Especially has it proven its efficacy in cu and Swellings, Enlarged Glands, and Eating Ulcers.

Rev. F. Asbury Howell, Pastor of the M. E. Church, of Süverton, N. J., says: "I was afflicted with catarrh and indigestion. Boils and blotches began to arise on the surface of the skin, and I experienced a tired feeling and dulness. I began the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery as directed by him for such complaints, and in one week's time I began to feel like a new man, and am now sound and well. The 'Pleasant Purgative Pellets' are the best remedy for bilous or sick headache, or tightness about the chest, and bad taste in the mouth, that I have ever used. My wife could not walk across the floor when she began to take your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' Now she can walk quite a little ways, and do some light work."

Mrs. Ida M. Strong, of Ainsworth, Ind., writes:
"My little boy had been troubled with hip-joint disease for two years. When he commenced the use of your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets,' he was confined to his bed, and could now, thanks to your 'Discovery,' he is able to be up all the time, and can walk with the help of crutches. He does not suffer any pain, and can eat and sleep as well as any one. It has only been about three months since he commenced using your medicine. I cannot find words with which to express my gratitude for the benefit he has received through you."

Skin Disease.—The "Democrat and News," of Cambridge, Maryland, says: "Mrs. Eliza Ann Poole, wife of Leonard Poole, of Waliamsburg, Dorchester Co., Md., has been cured of a bad case of Eczema by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The disease appeared first in her feet, extended to the knees, attacked the elbows and became so severe as to prostrate her. After being treated by several physicians for a year or two shecommenced the use of the medicine named above. She soon began to mend and is now well and hearty. Mrs. Poole thinks the medicine has saved her life and prolonged her days."
Mr. T. A. Ayrres, of East New Market, Dorchester County, Md., vouches for the above facts.

Thirty years ago, the writer of this knew him, when he was "Charley Fairchild," in Cazenovia, N. Y.-a very exemplary boy, a trifle exclusive, as was thought to become a member of an aristocratic family of the village, but of good habits, and good promise which seems to have been well justified

JOHN G. SAXE, poet, lecturer and editor, died at Albany, last Thursday. Many people have been charmed by his sprightly verses; but the value of his writings has been discounted for us by an incident in his life that came under our observation more than thirty years ago. He had lectured in a New York village, and then went on a prodigious carousal, and amused himself all night long in making the village tavern howl, kicking in the doors of the sleep ing rooms, and otherwise making the night a pandemonium for the peaceably disposed lodgers.

THE propensity of Michigan voters for hitting a head wherever they see it. can scarcely be excelled at Donnybrook; and as their own friends' heads are more handy by than any others, it usually happens that they are the ones to be cracked. The vote on Circuit Judge in this strong democratic circuit on Mayor in the strongly democratic Fourth and Fifth wards of this city. and on Alderman in the strong republican I hird ward, are illustrations. It seems to be confined to no party or section or conditions, and probably cannot be explained upon any general princi ples or special circumstances.

CERTAINLY second only to the votes on prohibition, in importance to the country, and rising far above any party considerations, was the contest with socialism and anarchism at the Chi cago election, Tuesday. Had the socialists carried the day, as they thought they would and others feared, there would have been occasion to prepare at once to meet the commune behind street barricades. Fortunately, the communards were decisively defeated reputable democrats and republicans uniting to overthrow them. It is a hopeful promise of what may be ex pected in this country when such a peril is recognized.

THE COMMUNE OF PARIS. Ex-Minister Washburne, in Scribner's Maga

But few people are fully aware of the immense proportions which the Paris Commune had taken on before its fina suppression. Its military strength was simply enormous. Cluseret told me of his furnishing rations at the time he was delegate to the Ministry of War, to one hundred and twenty-five thousand soldiers in Paris. And the amount of war material found in possession of the Commune at the time of its collapse was prodigious. There were 548,000 guns, of different models, with sabre bayonets; 56,000 cavalry sabres, of every form and description; 14,000 Enfield rifles; 39,000 revolvers; making a total of nearly 700,000 weapons of every kind taken from the hands of the Communards. Independently of the vast amount of this particular material, the military authorities of the Commune had 1,700 cannon and mitrailleuses, which they had robbed from the city and which they had used with such terrible effect But what must ever excite amazement is the knowledge of the vast number of the people in Paris at this time who not only were in sympathy with the Commune, but who abetted and sustained it in its career of crime and blood. The minority, embracing the better class of Paris, was completely cowed and subdued by this vast insur rectionary mass of population.

SHOOTING OF ARCHBISHOP DARBOY. About six o'clock on Wednesday evening a detachment of forty of the National Guard, belonging to the "Vengeurs of the Republic," as they were called, arrived at the prison with a captain, first and second lieutenants. a commissaire of police, and two civil delegates. They all wore bright-red scarfs. The names of the six martyrs were called. The President Bonjean occupying cell No. 1, was first; then the Abbe Deguerry, occupying cell No. 4 was the second; and the last called was Monseigneur Darboy, Archbishop of Paris, who occupied cell No. 23. The doors of the cells were then opened by the officer of the prison, and the victims were all ordered to leave. They descended, going to the foot of the staircase, where they embraced each other, and had a few words, the last on earth. Never was there a more mournful cortege, nor one calculated to awaken sadder emotions. Monseigneur Darboy. though weak and enfeebled by disease, gave his arm to Chief Justice Bonjean. and the venerable man, so well known in all Paris, Abbe Deguerry, leaned upon the arms of the two priests. A good many straggling National Guards and others had gathered around the you want a Life Insurdoor of the prison as the victims went out, and they heaped upon them the ance THAT INSURES vilest epithets, and to an extent that and no discount, go to aroused the indignation of a sub-lieutenant, who commanded silence, saying to them, "that which comes to these The Upsilantian. to them, "that which comes to these persons to-day, who knows but what the same will come to us to-morrow?" And a man in a blouse added, "men who go to meet death ought not to be insulted; none but cowards will insult the unfortunate." Arriving at the court of La Roquette, darkness had alin her room in that village a few weeks ready come on, and it was necessary to get lanterns to conduct the victims between the high walls which surrounded the court. Nothing shook the firmness of these men when they were thus being marched to assassination. The Archbishop was the coolest and firmest, because the greatest. He shook each one by the hand and gave him his last benediction. When they arrived at the place where they were to be shot, the victims were all placed against the walls which enclosed the sombre edifice of the prison of La Roquette. The Archbishop was placed at the head of the line, and the fiends who murdered him scratched with their knives a cross on the stone in the wall at the very place where his head must have touched it at the moment they fired the fatal shots. He did not fall at the first vollev, but stood erect, calm, and immovable, and before the other discharges came which launched him into eternity, he crossed himself three times upon his forehead. The other victims all fell together. The marks of the bullets after they had passed through their bodies were distinctly visible. The Archbishop was afterward mutilated and his abdomen cut open. All the bodies were then put in a cart and removed to Pere Lachaise, which was but a few squares off, where they were thrown into a common ditch (from which, however, they were happily rescued before decomposition had taken

Day and Night

During an acute attack of Bronchitis, a ceaseless tickling in the throat, and an exhausting, dry, hacking cough, afflict the sufferer. Sleep is banished, and great prostration follows. This disease is also attended with Hoarseness, and sometimes Loss of Voice. It is liable to become chronic, involve the lungs, and terminate fatally. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral affords speedy relief and cure in cases of Bronchitis. It controls the disposition to cough, and induces refreshing sleep.

I have been a practicing physician for twenty-four years, and, for the past twelve, have suffered from annual attacks of Bronchitis. After exhausting all the usual remedies

Without Relief,

I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It helped me immediately, and effected a speedy cure.—G. Stoveall, M. D., Carrollton, Miss. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is decidedly the best remedy, within my knowledge, for chronic Bronchitis, and all lung diseases.

I was attacked, last winter, with a severe Cold, which, from exposure, grew worse and finally settled on my Lungs. By night sweats I was reduced almost to a skeleton. My Cough was incessant, and I frequently spit blood. My physician told me to give up business, or I would not live a month. After taking various remedies without relief, I was finally two bottles of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I am now in perfect health, and able to resume business, after having been pronounced incurable with Consumption.—S. P. Henderson, Saulsburgh, Penn.

For years I was in a decline. I had weak lungs, and suffered from Bronchitis and Catarrh. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral restored me to health, and I have been for a long time comparatively vigorous. In case of a sudden cold I always resort to the Pectoral, and find speedy relief.—Edward E. Curtis, Rutland, Vt.

Two years ago I suffered from a severe Bronchitis. The physician attending me became fearful that the disease would terminate in Pneumonia. After trying various medicines, without benefit, he finally prescribed Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which relieved me at once. I continued to take this medicine a short time, and was cured.—Ernest Colton, Logansport, Ind.

How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

The house bills passed to amend the act creating the State Bureau of Labor; authorizing the State Board of Auditors to refund $160 to Daniel H. Walters, by reason of over-valuation of land sold him by the State; and to authorize the township board of Portsmouth, in Bay county, to borrow money. The most important bill considered was Mr. Webber's appropriating $7,000 to purchase land for use of the Ionia House of Correction. There were several lively tilts between members, and the bill was finally defeated. The House went into committee of the whole; Mr. Webber's garnishee bill was under consideration, and after a long discussion passed the committee. The bill passed the House to revise the laws providing for the incorporation of manufacturing companies.

THE BASILISK.

A STORY OF TO-DAY.

CHAPTER XXII.

BURIED ALIVE.

My secret, then, was discovered! The blood rushed back upon my heart. fear-a fear that made me silent-was my first emotion. It was a woman who had surprised my secret. True. But it was a woman whose beauty was a menace, whose love was a deadly danger. Her beauty had now threatened me; her love, I knew well enough, had doubly imperiled Mary Fortescue's safety.

I quietly covered with one hand the envelope I had been directing. She might have seen the direction; it was too late to guard against that, nor did it greatly matter. Whether she had or not, e battle was likely enough to have to be fought out before the Prussians, in the shape of Dr. Shaw, could arrive upon the

I turned to meet her gaze. I saw. closer than ever before, the lustrous wealth of dark hair, with natural waves in its luxuriance, which gave the same effect as light and shade confer upon heads of gold. saw closer than ever before, the broad low forehead, ivory-white, daintily fretted with the irregular outlines of the daintily curving hair; the rounded cheek, on which a flush had settled. And close-closer than all, gazing, not only into my face. but into my very soul, burning, fascinating, enchanting, those wonderful, inscrutable eyes, that seemed to have mastered all power, and to be content only with maddening, bewildering, tantalizing.
Then, like the breath of air on a spring evening, came the thought of Mary, rich in all womanly grace, strong in the weak ness that makes men worthy of their strength. No! God forbid that I should forget von for a flattering smile! I fixed my gaze upon the Basilisk as if upon some dangerous animal. I thought of that poor child, so crushed, so wronged; I thought the crimes and evil associations of that unhallowed household, and I rose, still looking at Miss Beaufoy, and stood face to face with the beautiful Circe. who wished no good to me nor to her to say, so I kept silence. She was evidently thinking of something. At last she spoke again, "You do not remember me, but I remember you. Some years ago you met me, in the street, in a music-shop in Bondstreet. I see you remember the woman, though you did not identify me." This was said with a sudden flash of jealous anger.

"Yes, it was I. You would have died for me then. I could see it in your face."

"I nearly did die for you." "Yes," she went on, "you nearly did die for me. Very likely. You expected me to drop into your arms—to yield to a sigh, to a longing look. You never thought that I might have loved so deeply, but have been a little too old and a little too wellbred to show it to a strange young man,

I will not be fool enough to think that you are making love to me. I was cured of a bovish folly by a terrible calamity, which I always attributed, ungallantly enough, to the power of your eyes. the armchair opposite to me."

The chair indicated was a wooden arm chair, of distinctly early English and uninviting aspect. But as my host, with iron-grey smile, indicated it with his blanched forefinger, and rose to guide me to it, all choice was taken from me, and I received a wholesome reminder that I need not admit everyone into the secret of my

And while I wondered again whether I had not been the victim of a hideous ocular illusion he smote with violence upon the knob on the table.

The chair in which I was seated tipped up. I clutched wildly, vainly at the air, and, with a crash, fell into vacancy.

I ascertained, however, that I had fallen upon a heap of loose mould, which seemed to have recently been thrown up, and which had certainly saved my bones, not my life, for all about I felt the hard surface of a concrete floor. I remembered it with joy, and was on the point of striking a light to relieve the horror of the unknown darkness, when suddenly the imprudence of such a course occurred to me forcibly.

Whatever happened, or whatever might be intended to happen, it was certain my fate would be further enquired into, and in the desperate circumstances in which I was now placed, it was not my cue to give any sign of life, or to prepare my enemies for any further opposition or resistance. I carefully replaced the matchbox in my who made wild eyes at me when he met me pocket, deriving a distinct comfort from the sense of power which the possession of the means of securing a light conferred upon me. And so for a while I sat upon the heap of mould in the darkness.

After a while the inaction became insupportable, and the darkness and silence began to play fantastic tricks with eye and stand the craving for light. I struck a match, and in a moment all imaginary terrors were dispersed. The clear flame of the wax vesta disclosed a spacious cellar or vault, with well-bricked ides and concrete floor. At one end was a door, which I examined, and found to be locked. Over the spot where I had fallen could dimly make out the machinery of the spring trap-door, through which I had been so suddenly precipitated into captivity. The earth upon which I had falleu was newly turned. In shape and disposition it recalled the idea of a newly-filled

If the mail came in on time the young woman helped to sort. wrap and dis tribute it while the stage waited. If it was late she had to be busy about the dinner and the Postmaster and his wife did the work. I was soon assured that the girl was the guilty party, and when I began to make inquiries about her I found that she had a very dissipated brother in Springfield, and that she wrote him at least once a week. I went to Springfield to look him up and found him drinking, playing billiards, and smoking eigars. Seemingly he had plenty of money. In all my decoy letters I had of course, marked the bills, and as luck would have it I had not shadowed the young one of these bills to a barkeeper, and I managed to secure it in change. Then I had him locked up, and I returned to

It will be seen by the following from the Ann Arbor Argus that a serious difference has arisen between the state and county authorities, and our people are liable to have the burden of taxa tion under which they already groan still further increased. This is what is the matter, as stated by the Argus "Seventy-nine cents claimed by the state, County Treasurer Belser refuses to pay, as it was decided by Auditor Stevens that the state had no claim for it. It's an old claim and one cent of the seventy nine was charged as interest." This will probably defer water works for a good while longer.

A Grand March.

"The University of Michigan Grand March," is the title of a composition for the piano just issued, of which our talented young friend, Will A. Mc-Andrew is the composer. We have examined the five pages of the March carefully, and can assure our readers that it is all right, so far as our information extends. We will confess, however, that there are some points connected with the composition of music on which we are not the highest authority. In the matter of sharps and flats we have had some experience. but in the musical sense of the terms we don't know them apart on paper. This fact, however, is of no consequence, as we are certain there is nothing flat in anything that Will produces. The slurs, too, so often indulged in by ordinary writers of music will not be found in Will's production; at least we don't think they will, for although we don't know much about music, we know a good deal about Will. and he is not one of the slurring kind. You can get the March for 50; cents. and if after you have tried it, if you don't like it, you can send to the author and get another at the same price. Rev. M. W. Fairfield has changed his residence from Ellis to Adams street, and now resides in the house recently occupied by Prof. Vroman. The latter has removed to his farm, Eddie Bradley, son of Wm Bradley proprietor of the new Huron street market, arrived here from Minneapolis last week. Eddie has been given much prominence during the past week or two, being charged with obstructing the railroad track near Eau Claire, Wis. The charge was without foundation, however, and was easily proven so Eddie's only connection with the offense being his discovery of the obstructions on the track.

Mere Mention.

Don't fail to hear Philip Philips at the M. E. church this week. His songs are richly illustrated.

The Ypsilanti Creamery resumed active operations Monday. It may be of interest to the young ladies, perhaps, to know that the creamery company contemplate supplying our local dealers with pure ice cream this summer. As a means of encouraging home enterpast the ice cream saloons and referring to the healthfulness and purity of the creamery cream as often as circum stances may permit.

The "Candle Social" given by the ladies of the Library Association, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Barnes, last Saturday evening, was an occasion of much pleasure and some profit. The first part of the evening ed to come back. was given to musical exercises, participated in by representatives of our best local talent, vocal and instrumental, and was followed by exhaustive efforts on the part of many present to distinguish themselves as prize blowers from a darkened standpoint. The prizes were awarded to Mrs. Austin George, Florence Goodison, Eber

Prof. Bellows is somewhat of an enthusiast in the line of Plymouth Rock chickens and is the proprietor of one of the neatest poultry yards in Washtenaw county. He is also a producer of small fruit and passes many pleas ant hours in caring for his plants and vines. Whether it be in preparing a text book on mathematics for the leading colleges and universites of the country, or properly planting a strawberry plant, or bearing with patience the idiosyncracies of a setting hen, Prof. Bellows does good work and the results are always satisfactory. There was a pleasant party of children at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Myron Cady in Pittsfield, last Friday, to celebrate the seventh birthday of their daughter, Miss Blanch. The new depot at Ann Arbor is truly a thing of beauty and it will be a joy to the U niversity town for a long time. The abrupt change from the poorest shed on the road to the splendid and elegant structure now provided was a fitting recognition on the part of the Michigan Central management of the patience and long-waiting exercised by its Ann Arbor patrons.
